Lith was a private matter. The university is not a public corporation. The people do not hold any stock in it. They have o right to know."

Whatever the legal nature of the organ

whatever the legal manner of the organization, Johns Hopkins created the university not for the benefit of the gentlemen whom he named as trustees, but for the benefit of the city of Baltimore and the state of Maryland, and the whole country, for that matter. The people of Baltimore are not to be bluffed in that way. They hald the trustees marging if not financially

The noney from students had amounted to over Many of our legistators have an itching to become constitution makers, though "constitution tinkers" would describe them better. Probably it was observation of this but it is commonly said to have been 10 per cent. Other economical measures were adopted, and all schemes for enlarging the usefulness of the university toward its intended scope were abandoned. Then the trustees passed the hat. They told their friends and the friends of the university that the institution was flat on its back. The income had failed, but they hoped that it would revive again. If $100,000 could be raised it would keep the university running during the years 1890 and 1891. By that time they would know what to expect from the Baltimore & Ohio stock.

The money was pledged and it is now certain that the work of the faculty of philosophy will be continued during that time. The trustees get together and tell each other that by that time the present masses; its danger from the uneasy poli-
